Omaha continues forging to the front in more ways than one, but the way that attracts attention all over the country is in the remarkable but steady gain in bank clearings, which is published all over the country. Many smaller towns which are having a splendid growth may show a larger percentage of increase, but of the substantial cities Omaha ranks well to the front, showing a gain of 16 per cent for Ross, while gambling. last week over the corresponding period last year.

Omaha ranked sixteenth in the list of this is remarkable when it is considered that no town with a smaller population has as great bank clearings, while many cities much larger than Omaha are further down the list. Among these are Milwaukee, Denver. Providence, Buffalo, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Los Angeles, Washington and Roinjunction is Perpetual. Injunction is Perpetual.

Judge Troup has made perpetual a temporary injunction against the city of South Omains issued on July 14 on asplication of Henry C. Sautter. The injunction will prevent the city and Cash Bros., contractors, from grading Q street in front of lot 7, block 8, last addition to South Omaha; also the alley abutting said property. Judge Troup holds that Sautter had no proper notice of the time or place where appraisers would sit to consider damages to be awarded on account of the proposed grading.

Westward the Course of Empire Depicted en a Forty-Foot Canvass.

MOVING SCENE FOR THE HAWKEYE CAPITOL

Designed to Adorn the Reconstructed Building-A Notable Exhibit.

The north wall of the Vanderbilt gallery in the American Fine Arts, 125 West Fiftyseventh street, New York, is none too large for the canvas required to decorate one end of the main story of the Capitol of Iowa, at Des Moines. Fourteen feet high and forty feet long, it presents a moving scene and a scene of moving, since it is a visible interpretation of the line, "Westward the course of empire takes its whose mural works for Baltimore and St. Paul have been exhibited from time to moved to the places for which they are factors.

destined. The Iowa state capitol is a long building with central dome, the lunettes within which are to be decorated by Mr. Kenyon Cox. At one end of the main floor a double stairway rises to the floor on the right and stair well. Beyond this balustrade, and on a level with the floor, is a wall space where niches like an arcade, which will be filled by mosaics and paintings from Mr. Dielman, president of the National Academy. The big decoration is therefore to be seen siderable distance beyond certain columns, as well as the balustrade and stair well

ADMITS GUILT IN SEVERAL CASES

Says He Came Here from Idaho, Became Desperate and Resorted to Burglary to Secure Living.

George Wilson pleaded guilty to burglary before Judge Day in the criminal department of the district court Saturday norning and was sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. Wilson is the young man who was arrested on suspicion of having entered the residence of F. S. Cowgill by way of the front porch one night recently. The plunder taken consisted of jewelry valued at $86. That the police made a good catch was proven shortly after Wilson had been arraigned before Judge Day. He first entered a plea of not guilty and the court named Attorney E. H. Clark to defend him. Wilson at once held a conference with the attorney and within a few minutes anunced he was ready to change his pleao guilty on the Cowgill charge.

County Attorney Slabaugh told the court that, while only one charge had been preferred, the police suspected Wilson of having committed burgiary at Senator Millard's residence and the residences of Tom The seat sale for the Eames concert at Dennison Judge Wakeley and M. BIG AD FOR NEBRASKA CORN Samples on Exhibition in Wall Street and Broadway Attract Much Attention.

Some of the corn shown at the exhibition of the Douglas County Agricultural seciety on the King's Highway is attracting attention on Wall street and Broadway, New York. Charles H. Pickens secured the corn. and put it on wires, making two strings of about a bushel each. It was of the white and yellow Dent varieties and the ears were unusually large and solid. One was sent to William Demuth & Co., on Broadway, and the other to the Bennett company, on Wall street, and with each one the placard: "Nebraska corn, grown thirteen miles west of Omaha. Estimated crop, 275,000,000 bushels."

Mr. Pickens has just received a note from William Demuth, saying: "Your corn has been in my window a week and it has attracted so much attention that I am going * to leave it there another week." A letter from Bennett said thousands of people had stopped to look at the corn. "I count that a good advertisement for Nebraska," said Mr. Pickens. "A window on Broadway is worth about $500 a minute, I guess, and here we have had space in the window for two weeks for nothing. Many people in New York have never seen an ear of corn and the display was a good thing for Demuth and Bennett as well as for Nebraska."
